A cap and gown ceremony in which 68 graduates in Menard State Prison, Menard, Ill., participated a few days ago has attracted wide attention. In this new attire they marched back to resume life in their prison cells.

Their wearing caps and gowns made history for it was the first time that these had been worn by such graduates.

In their courses of study, several graduates were awarded eighth grade diplomas and special prisoners completed 300 special study courses. These studies ranged from

Finch Attorney Ambassador Amasasp Aroutunian had talked for 35 minutes. Neither Hopes To Shake Key Testimony

LOS ANGELES (UPI)-Defense attorney Grant Cooper prepared Saturday for a major attempt to shake the testimony of a key state witness against Dr. R. Ber-nard Finch and Carole Tregoff when the murder retrial resumes Monday.

Finch's lawyer, one of southern California's most noted criminal attorneys, will resume his crossexamination Monday of John Patrick (Jack) Cody, a Minnesota convict and professed "ladies man." It was Cody who testified Carole and the surgeon paid him $1400 in a murder-for-hire plot to kill Barbara Jean Finch-which he claims he never intended to Cody, a prosecution witness, re peated his earlier story when he testified Friday. He told of meeting with Miss Tregoff in Las Vegas and accepting a down pay ment for the "killing job." He also told of talking with Finch, accused of deliberately shooting nis wife at their West Govina home on July 18, 1959.

Cooper sparred with Cody in preliminary cross - examination Friday. But he was expected to make a major attempt Monday to break down the incriminating testimony.

Miss Tregoff, 23, a former model, suffered a major reversal during the week when Superior Judge LeRoy Dawson refused to permit her to regain her freedom on bail during the second trial. Carole was returned to jail on July 19 when she failed to appear for a court session and a county doctor failed to support a claim she could not because of illness.

Negro Showmen Allowed To Play

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) - City officials announced Saturday they have agreed to permit Negro entertainers to perform next Wednesday in Municipal Auditorium before separate white and Negro audiences.

Henry Mayer, promoter of the show which will feature nationally known Negro entertainers Dakota Staton and Sam Cooke, brought an injunction suit against the city to prevent cancellation of the show.

The city had banned the performances "in the interest of public safety." Officials indicated they feared racial problems. But they said they have reached agreement with the promoter and will ask that the injunction be dropped. A performance for whites will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday and the Negro performance will begin

100-Mile Hour Winds Strike Okla. Section

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Winds up to 100 miles an hour swept through central Oklahoma overnight, causing at least two injuries and considerable property

Hardest hit were Oklahoma City, Enid, Chickasha and Ponca

Hail slammed into the north-west section of Oklahoma City. The Will Rogers Airport tower went out of operation as power failed and windows were smashed. Some light planes on the field were nosed over by the gusts. A twin-engine C45 at Oklahoma City's Tulakes Airport was blown 200 yards through two chain-link fences and nearly wrapped around a utility pole. Four buildings were demolished at Enid with damage estimated at $25,000. Small hail and rain measuring 2.71 inches left water running curb deep in parts of the Plate glass windows were broken in five downtown Chickasha stores. The roof of Radio Station KWCO was damaged.

The roof of a Chickasha packing plant was lifted off, and two other trailers were blown together at a mobile homes factory.

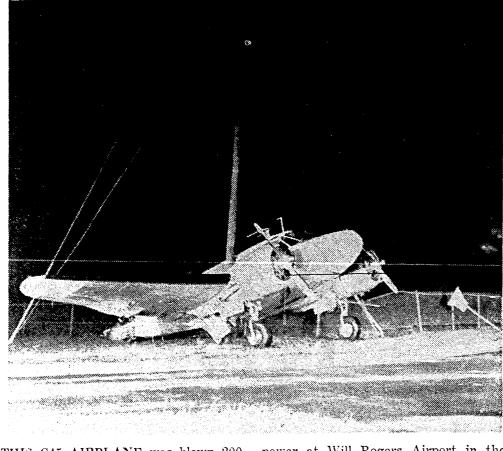

Ronnie Mills, 14, was injured at Chickasha when pieces of a blowndown shed struck him. He was not seriously hurt. At Ponca City power lines were blown down and trees uprooted. George Grauer was injured when rain blinded his vision and his auto hit a utility pole in Oklahoma City. He was treated at a hospital and released.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

Gains Spotlight

By AUSTIN MILLER

After a long time in the back-ground on the educational scene, the vocational school has moved into the spotlight.

A good example is the Ouachita Valley Vocational - Technical School in West Monroe.

OVVTS was established in July, 1944. At that time, only four fields of training were offered: aircraft engines, auto mechanics, machine shop and electricity - radio.

TRAINING AREAS

Today there are 11 areas of training in the day program and 23 in the extension program, ranging from program, to the company of the compan ranging from farm mechanics to industrial electronics technology.

Results in every field have ranged from good to outstanding. A talk with school director S. W. Jackson shows why.

One advantage of the school is its flexibility. Courses in any subject can be, and frequently are, opened and continued as long as the need exists.

"We try to be prepared for any technological advances in this area," Jackson says. "As soon as local industry adopts a new method, it's our job to train the people who rill we is. the people who will use it.

"For example, local industry has started using electronics equipment, so we now have a course in industrial electronics — including such practical uses as radar and closed - circuit televi-

"A lot of companies are turning to two-way radio, so we offer a radio course that includes both transmitting and receiving. "And it doesn't stop there. We try to keep up to date in every vocational field, rather than just

When the school opened in 1944, the cost per student was $158.27. Last year, the per student cost was $147.90, or an actual decrease of seven per cent. According to latest figures, the statewide cost per student was $318.04, or more than twice the Ouachita Valley expenditure. COSTS How are costs kept so low?

Careful buying, explains Jackson.

"Here's a good example," he says, pointing to a huge, hulking machine. "We bought this piece of equipment as surplus, for a total cost of $114, yet its actual retail value is several thousand dollars. Buying a lot of our heavy equipment this way makes a terrific difference in the annual budget.'

Not that all supplies are purchased this way. In the business school, for example, one-third of the machines are replaced with new equipment each year. Jackson is particularly proud of the business education course.

"In fact, all of our courses are free. This is a state - supported school, so there's no charge for tuition or supplies." There is no set length for courses. All instruction is on an individual basis, so the student progresses at his own speed, ac-

AFTER 15 YEARS Survivors Recall Crash

(NOTE: Filteen ago last week, on July 28, 1945. a two - engine Army bomber crashed into the 79th floor of the Empire State Building in New Nork City, killing 14 persons and injuring many others. United Press International has searched out some of the survivors of that crash, including four women who were trapped for one hour, expecting to die, in an office of Catholic War Relief Services. Here is their recollection of that day, and what it has done to their lives.

By BARBARA BUNDSCHU NEW YORK (UPI) — "It was no hazier than it is today," said Catherine R. O'Connor at the window of her 65th floor office in the Empire State Building. "We the Empire State Building. "We could see down to the street." But the control tower at La-Guardia Airport, six miles away, warned the pilot of an Army bomber, "We can't see the top of the Empire State Building." At Bedford, Mass., the wife of its pilot hugged her infant son and tried to shake away "a premonition of disaster.'

NIGHTMARES That was the scene that recurred in the nightmares Miss O'Connor suffered — as did most of the women trapped with her in the office-for months.

"I don't think anything will ever bother me again-to look t," she said, reflectively. On 34th Street, 17-year-old Don-

Therapy In Voice Culture

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP) - Somehow, the Air Force captain's wife managed to get through each dayrouting her two sons from bed. feeding them, sending them off to school—without being able to utter an articulate sound. For more than 10 months she was voiceless. Then she met Rabbi Louis Kuppin. To him, her case was a challenge. The doctors, she said, had been unable to account for her condition, and examination showed no organic disorder. Rabbi Kuppin worked patiently and by the end of May — four months after he started — Mrs. John T. Phillips was able to say, clearly and distinctly: "I think he did a real fine job, a wonderful job.

HELPING

In helping Mrs. Phillips regain her voice, Kuppin was not in his role as rabbi of the B'Nai Israel Temple of Columbus, Miss., but as Louis Kuppin, sometime voice therapist and onetime concert

What did he do for Mrs. Phillips that she says doctors couldn't? 'It was singing, if you could call it that, and practicing sounds like ay-ah-oh and fi-fa-fo. A whole lot of them," she says. Explained the rabbi, in New York on a vacation trip: "It is something I have been doing for 45 years. Like other singers and voice teachers, I originally thought of voice culture only in terms of aiding a beautiful singing voice. But an experience with a student who had a node on her vocal cord changed my thinking and I began to see voice culture in terms of its therapeutic value. I thought that if I could help humankind with this it would be another way for me to serve God." WHITE HAIRED Now 78, the white-thatched great-grandfather created some stir in the musical world when he published an article in 1923 saying that medical science had not gone far enough in the treatment of voice afflictions and advancing the idea that medical schools should include courses in voice culture. He might have gone on spending most of his time in voice therapy and as a singer. But in 1923, his mother expressed a deathbed wish that he become a rabbi.

Dutifully, he did so. For a number of years he served in Quincy, Ill. For the last 13 years he has been in Columbus, Miss.

But through it all, he has worked with people having voice trouble. "It was my avocation. How many people have there been? Good Lord, I couldn't tell you. There have been many over the years. They are people who hear about me by word of mouth," he Now, 35 years after making his vow to his mother, he feels he can spend a little more time helping people with voice problems.

"I haven't the strength and endurance to do as much as I used to, but it worries me to know there are people who are silent and who do not need to be," he says. "I want to give these people a new lease on life.

Alaskans Take To Air

The urge to take to the air knows few barriers in the big 49th state.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) -

With almost twice as many miles of certified air lanes as all-weather

States.

Take Scotte McCutcheon, 17. for example. This trim brunette high school beauty learned to fly when she was 12, before she could Economics is another problem that Alaskan pilots have pretty well licked. FIRST RIDE

"But that doesn't mean we keep planes like a second family automobile," says M. F. Alewine, a lapor union official who took his first plane ride 30 years ago as a schoolboy at Clovis, N.M.

The secret, says Alewine, is that most private pilots here use their planes for a combination of business and recreation.

The system must work. With a 1960 population of only 224,000, Alaska has more than 4,500 certified pilots-including more than 2,800 ranked by the Federal Aviation Agency as active. Another 650 Alaskans are student pilots. Some 2,000 planes are in active use in Alaska, double the total of Montana which is listed in second place by the FAA. EARLY START

The air age got an early start here, where the plane was the logical successor to the dog sled and the river boat in conquering transportation problems over vast territorial expanses. Although the nation's largest state, Alaska has only 4,310 miles of all-weather highways-compared with 8,000 miles of certified air lanes. The famed Alaska bush pilots still play a key part in Alaska's present-day life, but a majority

Odds Are Beaten By Family With Midgets Aplenty

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The clothesline at the J. E. Clifton home at 1200 Crestwood Rd. never has anything but children's wear waving in the breeze. That's because three generations of midgets live there. Scientists say chances of a person's being born a midget are a million to one. And for the grandparents, parents and children all to be midgets the odds are astronomical.

BEAT ODDS

Johnny Clifton met his wife in New Mexico during the 1920's when he was traveling over the country as "Buster Brown" of shoe company fame.

The family of midgets first beat the odds when the Clifton's caughter turned out to be a midget. She married another midget, Clarence Swenson of Austin, and two of three Swenson daughters are midgets.

Now all seven members of the family live in a scaled - down house in Austin. They had a fling in show business, starting with the Chicago Fair in 1934, but came back to Clifton's native and her father at the controls. Her father is Stanley J. McCutcheon, an Anchorage lawyer who got his first flying instructions 21 years ago and who has owned a dozen planes since then. He now pilots a two-place float plane he moors at nearby Lake Hood Airport, only 15 minutes driving time from home. McCutcheon spends about 250 hours in the air during an average year. Between business trips, the plane is used for short hops to his weekend fishing cabin near Anchorage.

COSTS "Maintenance costs run about $50 a month," McCutcheon says. "and major repairs are infrequent." In all his years of flying. the most severe damage any of his planes have suffered have been broken skis caused during landings on rough snow or ice.

There are more than 300 airports in Alaska. Almost any lake, river, sand bar, beach or snowfield is fair game for a pilot seeking a landing place.

There are three airports at Anchorage — Lake Hood, municipal Merrill Field and the big stateowned International Airport which is a refueling base for numerous polar route jets. The three handle more than 400,000 takeoffs and landings a year. The operational totals of the little municipal airport exceed those of Idlewild Airport in New York and the big airports at Atlanta and Birmingham, Ala.

Lake Hood is the largest private seaplane base in the world. More than 200 float planes are moored there, with owners paying up to $15 a month for berths.

'It's still not big enough," says an FAA official. "We've got more than 100 pilots on the waiting list and no place to put them."

Voting Machines Good

With elections for top offices in the nation taking place this year, many voters are pondering the accuracy of the voting machines' role in the process of casting votes.

The public has every right to question all facets of elections. particularly whatever device is used, marked ballot or voting machine, which concerts the individual's opinion into a statistic.

In the Louisiana gubernatorial election last fall, several areas in the state reported possible "fixes" where voting machines were involved. In a public service film from the state custodian of voting machines and the secretary of state of Louisiana, the possibility of voting machines frauds is discussed. Both Wade O. Martin Jr., secretary of state, and Douglas Fowler, voting machine custodian, point out that today's voting machines are far less susceptible to voting frauds than were the old paper ballots.

To go along with the so-called "Australian" or secret ballot, there was a crooked device known as the Tasmanian dodge. It was developed by vote buyers to make sure the votes they bought were honestly—or dishonestly—cast as ordered. The vote buyer paid his money to the voter and gave him a blank piece of paper the same size as the ballot. When the sold out voter went to the polling place, he was issued his ballot but did not mark

Instead, he hid the real ballot on his person and dropped the blank piece of paper into the ballot box. Then the unmarked ballot was returned to the vote buyer. With such a system started, the vote buyer handed the stolen ballot-already marked as he wished-to the next customer. The customer deposited the marked ballot in the box in place of his own and took his unmarked ballot to the vote buyer and picked up his pay.

The two officials did not state flatly that a voting machine could not under any circumstances be "rigged." But they built a good case on the grounds that voting machines offer more safeguards for the voter than any other type balloting.

While tampering with the old paper ballots, booths, and boxes was a legal offense in former times, enforcement was often difficult. Ballot box stuffing often went so far as to outnumber the registered voters in the precinct. Sometimes ballot boxes were stolen, accidentally destroyed or "just vanished."

This cannot happen in the case of a voting machine. As for laws, the laws protecting voting machines outnumber those protecting banks. In order to cross check on any possible tampering, each machine carries a built-in protective counter. It records every time the machine is operated whether by a mechanic, a voter or a would - be

It is a felony to break and enter a warehouse where voting machines are stored. Likewise, it is a felony to break and enter a voting precinct in order to tamper with voting machines. Also attemping to tamper or "rig" a machine during polling hours can result in fines of up to three thousand dollars or imprisonment for one to two years either with or without hard labor.

Our democratic system which includes the vote of the individual means nothing if elections are "rigged." While voting machines may not be perfect in all instances, they make the nearest approach to an honest election yet develop-

L.S.U. Alumni News

The LSU Alumni Federation, composed of thousands and thousands of LSU graduates all over the world, represents a big bloc of people, especially at home in Louisiana.

Its official voice is—and has been for several years—a monthly publication—the Alumni News.

Thus, it is important not only to the federation but to the university and state as well that the Alumni News be presented on a high-level journalistic level.

This is so because the Alumni News is in an excellent position to inform its many readers of the growing problems of education and what the state's chief educational institution is doing to combat these problems.

In view of this, the World is happy to see a marked improvement in the quality of the Alumni News-a fact clearly brought out in the latest edition.

In this particular edition, there were numerous enlightening articles, featuring an excellent comparison of Ameria's education system to Russia's by U.S. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who received his Master's Degree at LSU.

Edited by Dan E. Bivins III, a native Monroyan and former World staffer, the Alumni News should do much in future years to assist the federation in playing a major and active part in the affairs of LSU, an institution that is all-important to each and every citizen of Louisiana.

Capital Gains Tax

Certain kinds of property, including real estate, stocks and other securities, are subject to a maximum capital gains tax of 25 per cent. In any event, under capital gains, the tax is not more than half the regular rate.

In other words, if an investor sells holdings, after owning them six months or more, he may pay a maximum 25 per cent federal tax on the profit, instead of the regular personal income tax.

Actually, the capital gains tax is a penalty. The person who buys property, sells it for a profit and then buys other property suffers a big loss because he is penalized for the enhanced value of the first property he owned buts gets no discount on the new because of inflated prices. The money an investor uses to buy securities in the first place has already been subected to income tax, at times anging up to 91 per cent.

Other highly industrialized countries, such as Canada and England, do not tax capital gains. They recognize the tax is a serious barrier to investment.

If the national strength and welfare is to be maintained, we too should free capital gains of tax-

CHICAGO - As the Big Man of the Convention, you'd have to pass over the nomination winner, Richard Nixon, and call it close finish between Barry Goldwater and Nelson Rockefeller.

My sentimental in clination would be to give the final nod to the Arizona Senator, a warm friend of long standing and of the right political persuasion. With the Governor of New York I have no more than a hand clasp acquaintance, but it's plain to me, in spite of bias, that Rockefeller not only deserves the BMOC award but that he has a major quality which makes for statesmanship in our mid - cen-

What is this prime qualification of leadership? It is the willingness of a public man to be un-Nothing comes harder to a politician than this. Nothing is rarer, and nothing is more indispensable to contemporary statemanship.

Vice President Nixon does not have any stomach at all for taking unpopular but veracious stands, either against public opinion or within the Republican party. Goldwater couldn't care less about people's reactions if he feels he's right - but Rockefeller goes both men one better. He is politically braver than Nixon, and he is more affirmative and more constructive than Goldwater in running against the popularity pressures — not just to be doing so, but in order to govern well.

This trait in Rockefeller caused more irritation among the Convention leaders and delegates. They are sore at him for his satiric attack on Nixon several weeks ago as a top - of - the fence leader, and for the electionsea son criticism of President Eisenhower. Yet those who know him well admit that Rockefeler had to do these things or be untrue to himself.

The Governor infuriated many of the GOP platform committee members who had been working in the swelter of a 90 - degree city for the better part of a week when he announced his high level treaty with Nixon on 14 points of the platform. And the entire party, perhaps the entire nation, probably feels disappointed that Rockefeller didn't do the unselfish thing long ago and join Nixon in a dream ticket. It will be noted that in every instance Rockefeller, who is ambitious and will presumably be seeking Republican good - will for the rest of his life, incurred the active dislike of people who could eventually be of help to him. He does not behave this way out of misanthropy of perversity, but because he puts other things ahead of being liked and appreciated by his fellows. The Rockefeller behavior pattern is not new in him. He's always been that way. In 1959, as a fledgling executive in Albany, he began his gubernatorial career by coming out for higher taxes. In 1960 he tried for a building program bomb shelters, a measure which his advisors warned him would lead to rejection end even ridicule.

The most powerful impression which Nelson Rockefeller has made since he entered active politics less than two years ago is not his liberalism, or his personal charm, or his administra-tive ability — although all these are pronounced. it is his obstinance in a well - grounded position. The ordinary pressures of politicis-friendship, opportunism, popularity — do not budge him at all.

Who can name a better leadership quality for the 1960's? It is unpopular - but how important! - to tell people that they cannot have welfare programs without paying for them. It is soothing for politicans to talk 'peace' but it is vital for the people to be told that they need more arms-$3 billion a year more, says Rockefeler, speaking from an informed position. Anybody can make fun of the expensive, go-underground, passive defense in a shelter program. It sounds suspiciously like a public works boondoggle, or a war - scare

Yet it is entirely possible that we will exchange nuclear weawith an enemy during th 1960's. Millions of Americans may have to die. The entire structure of our public life may be devastated. Some of the best minds i the country have accepted these dire possibilities, and have asked themselves how we can live through them as a nation. The answer is that we must begin again in each American community with the survivors. Bomb shelters and a home guard could be our last, best line of defense and of recovery. Rockefeller believes this and as with his other beliefs, has stuck it out. In small matters and in large ones he is the sameimpervious to the seductress of democracy - popularity.

Daily Devotional

In those days, there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes. - Judges 21:25.

The tribe of Benjamin was al most wiped out by civil war and the Jews were alarmed by this prospect. In trying to save this tribe and supply its remaining men with wives, there was a period of utter confusion - for there was no king in Isreal." Beneath this confusion, however, was to be found a strong inclination to order; and there were still people who devoutly trusted in God as King. Now, without compulsion or restraint, we can also turn to God as Mentor and Guide, in all things.

O God, may we make Thee our King and leader in the knowledge that we need direction and inspiration. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.

New Drug Treatment For Mental Illness

Nixon Sees Republican House Gains

CHICAGO (UPI) - Republican candidate Richard M. Nixon said Friday he is "starting behind" Democrat John F. Kennedy in the race for the White House. But he predicted the Republicans would win by campaigning "until our throats are raw."

He also told a news conference the GOP had a "fighting chance" to wrest control of the House from the Democrats in November. He conceded the Republicans had no chance to win control of the Sen-

Nixon announced that if elected president he would put his running mate, Henry Cabot Lodge, charge of all non-military cold war activities. He said this was one of the big reasons why he chose Lodge for the vice presidential nomination.

Lodge would be chairman of a new group charged with coordinating and directing such projects as the foreign aid and information programs. Nixon proposed such a cold war establishment in his wildly-acclaimed acceptance speech to the GOP convention.

The vice president said he believed he was starting behind in his election campaign because the Democrats have a larger registration of voters. He noted that they also have more members of Congress, which strengthens local

But he said "we start with no pessimism, we believe we will win" because of the "strong kind of campaign" to be put on by himself, plus Lodge and other Republicans such as New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and President Eisenhower.

Nixon firmly refused to discuss any "religious issue" that might be raised as a result of Kennedy's Catholic religion. He was asked about a report that he might consider taking the Rev. Billy Graham into his cabinet because of the "religious issue."

He replied by saying that the religious issue would be injected into the campaign only to the extent that the other candidates talked about it.
"I shall never talk about it," he declared, "and we will start right

At his news conference, and at an earlier meeting with the GOP national committee, Nixon also: Outlined a whirlwind schedule of early campaigning next week which will take him to Nevada, California, Hawaii and Washingtor State before returning to the nation's capital for the session of Congress starting Aug. 8. -Said he hoped to work out an agreement with Kennedy and Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, Democratic vice presidential nominee, that would permit all of them to campaign on weekends during the August congressional session. Under Nixon's plan. no important Senate votes would be taken at that time.

-Said his meeting Saturday with midwestern farm leaders will be "primarily a listening sesson" for him. During the next two weeks he will set a date for a "major" farm speech during the early days of the campaign. He said the GOP must strengthen itself in the farm belt. -Disclosed that Eisenhower played a major role in the decision to make Lodge the vice presidential nominee. He said Lodge was very high on the President's list "and you can draw any implications from that you

-Made clear he felt it would be improper for him to try to tell Congress what it should do in its August session. He said that is Eisenhower's prerogative and the President has "definite views to

-Said he expects Eisenhower to make several speeches during the election campaign because the President "wants to play as effective a part as he can.'

-Announced that Lodge will be given "very great responsibility for making speeches and "pro-nouncements" in the foreign policy field during the campaign. But he said Lodge would make no "political appearance" until after giving up his U.N. job, probably in

Negroes And Whites Clash In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—For the second time in as many days Negroes and white persons clashed at the Bessemer Park swimming pool on the South Side Friday night. Each incident erupted after some 50 Negroes had arrived at the pool used mainly by white persons. A menacing crowd of 750 gathered Friday night as members of both races flung fists, rocks and insults at each other Fourteen persons were arrested charged with either disorderly conduct or unlawful assembly They were released on bond.

More than 100 policemen were called out to quell the fighting Two policemen suffered black eyes.

The first night's disturbance resulted in 21-day jail sentences for two Negroes on disorderly conduct charges. Charges against five other persons, white and Negro, were dismissed. Negroes have used the Bes semer pool in the past but never in such large numbers. The pool is in a predominantly white r but Negro neighborhoods are nearby.
